- 22.2. Digital Assets are historically more volatile relative to fiat currency and other assets and the unpredictability of the price of Digital Currencies relative to fiat currency may result in significant loss over a short period of time.
- 22.3. Digital Assets are not legal tender, are not backed by the government or a central bank and generally have no underlying assets, revenue stream, or other source of value tied to fiat currency or other assets.
- 22.4. Legislative and regulatory changes or actions within any jurisdiction or on international level may adversely affect the use, transfer, exchange, and value of Digital Currencies.
- 22.5. The value of Digital Assets may be derived from the continued willingness of market participants to exchange fiat currency for Digital Currencies, which may result in the potential for permanent and total loss of value of a particular Digital Currency should the market for that Digital Currency disappear.
- 22.6. Some Digital Assets transactions shall be deemed to be made when recorded on a public ledger, which is not necessarily the date or time that the User initiates the transaction.

- 22.7. Digital Assets ownership is often determined by a decentralized public ledger that associates an amount of Digital Currencies with a unique address defined by a public cryptographic key. A private cryptographic key is required to transfer Digital Currency from one address to another. Anyone with access to the private key associated with the address can transfer the associated Digital Currency.
- 22.8. Digital Assets transfers generally cannot be cancelled or reversed and the identity of the holder of the private key associated with any address can be difficult, if not impossible, to ascertain.
- 22.9. The nature of Digital Assets may lead to an increased risk of fraud or cyberattack.
- 22.10. Losses due to fraudulent or accidental transactions may not be recoverable. If you have a dispute with sellers or buyers, you agree to deal directly with them and hold the Company blameless in all disputes.
- 22.11. The nature of Digital Assets means that any technological difficulties experienced by the Company may prevent the access or use of a User's Digital Currency.
